

Make your voice heard To The Editor: The North Carolina General Assembly's Redistricting Committees are in process of drawing the state Senate and House districts, following the 2020 Census.

Although there has been a general outcry, via limited public hearings and a comment portal that is not shared to the public, the legislators are not considering the requirements of what remains of the Voting Rights Act or certain requirements of court cases over the last decade. The NCGA has spent our money defending lawsuits since the 2011 Redistricting process, and they lost every time because they violated federal or state law. Now they are setting the taxpayers up, yet again, by forcing through maps that they either do, or should know, will result in more costly litigation. You can let your opinion heard by the joint NCGA Redistricting Committees at <https://www.ncleg.gov/requestforcomments/38>. It's our pocketbook, after all.
